RUSSIA EXPELLED two American tourists
after a spy trial

The Soviet Union said one of the two men, Mark Kaminsky, 26, of Jefferson Township, Mich., had been sentenced to seven years in prison but that the sentence was commuted to expulsion because of his "sincere confession and repentance." The other American, Harvey Bennett, 36, of Stacy, Calif., "denounced Kaminsky's activities" during an appearance by Bennett as a witness for the prosecution, the Soviet added. The two were said to have been ousted at the Soviet-Czechoslovakian border town of Uzhgorod, but their present whereabouts were not immediately known.

Kaminsky and Bennett had been touring Russia by car and were en route from Moscow to Minsk when they were arrested August 25 on spy charges. Moscow charged that they deviated from their route and that Kaminsky collected intelligence information and took pictures of various defense installations.
